Unproven therapies and media hype 267

We should be wary of unproven treatments that may be worse than the disease.

J.D. CLOUGH

1-MINUTE CONSULTS

Brief answers to specific clinical questions

Should patients with documented or probable coronary artery disease routinely be placed on beta-blockers before noncardiac surgery? 273

Evidence from randomized, controlled trials indicates that most patients should receive beta-blockers in this situation.

J.H. ISAACSON

Can fibromyalgia and chronic fatigue syndrome be cured by surgery? 277

The hypothesis is interesting, but data are lacking.

W.S. WILKE

Should an ACE inhibitor be stopped if signs of renal insufficiency appear? 280

One must consider the magnitude of the decline and the expected benefits of continuing the medication.
