FROM THE EDITOR .....

Why is fixing the plumbing so difficult? 840

For carotid stenosis, a catheter-based procedure would seem safer than endarterectomy, but reality is not always so simple.

B.F. MANDELL

THE CLINICAL PICTURE .....

Cornflake-like scales on the ankles and feet 848

An 81-year-old woman presents with slowly growing, asymptomatic lesions on both feet and ankles. Which test should be ordered to establish the diagnosis?

C. GÓMEZ-FERNÁNDEZ, B.C. VERRIER, L.S. CANALEJAS, R.M.A. DE CELADA, AND P.H. PINTO

CURRENT DRUG THERAPY .....

MAO inhibitors: Risks, benefits, and lore 859

Monoamine oxidase inhibitors were the first antidepressants introduced. Interest in their use is reviving.

M. WIMBISCUS, O. KOSTENKO, AND D. MALONE

1-MINUTE CONSULT .....

Should alpha-blockers ever be used as antihypertensive drugs? 884

They are not first-line drugs, but they can be second-line or third-line add-on drugs if blood pressure is not under control.

G. ROSSITTO, G. KAMATH, AND F.H. MESSERLI

INTERPRETING KEY TRIALS .....

Understanding the CREST results. Carotid stenting vs surgery: Parsing the risk of stroke and MI 892

For patients with carotid artery stenosis, percutaneous intervention with stenting is as good as surgery—with some qualifications.

O. AKSOY, S.R. KAPADIA, C. BAJZER, W.M. CLARK, AND M.H. SHISHEBOR

CME CREDIT MEDICAL GRAND ROUNDS ..... 903

Vitamin D and the heart:
Why we need large-scale clinical trials

Despite enthusiasm for vitamin D, no large-scale primary prevention trial has used cardiovascular disease or cancer as a prespecified primary outcome.

J.E. MANSON

CME CREDIT REVIEW ..... 911

The homocysteine hypothesis:
Still relevant to the prevention and treatment of cardiovascular disease?

Elevated homocysteine is a risk factor, and vitamins lower homocysteine levels. But does vitamin supplementation prevent cardiovascular events?

J.M. ABRAHAM AND L. CHO

CME CREDIT REVIEW ..... 919

Managing gout:
How is it different in patients with chronic kidney disease?

The goals are the same, but the choice and dosage of drugs may need to be modified.

H. EL-ZAWAWY AND B.F. MANDELL

DEPARTMENTS ..... 843

Letters to the Editor

Readers comment on nutritional supplementation after bariatric surgery (July 2010) and on glucocorticoid-induced osteoporosis (August 2010).

CME Calendar ..... 856

Index to Volume 77 ..... 929

Directions for taking CME tests online ..... 933
