FROM THE EDITOR

The oracle of cough

About 18 months ago my wife began coughing. After a month or so, I naively wondered about the possibility of pertussis.

REVIEW

Primary percutaneous coronary intervention for acute MI: Improving access and outcomes

Patients have a better chance of surviving an acute ST-segment elevation myocardial infarction if they undergo percutaneous coronary intervention (PCI) rather than fibrinolytic therapy. Studies have addressed ways to improve PCI and to make it more accessible.

IMAGING IN PRACTICE

New series: Imaging in practice

Each article begins with an actual case and focuses on how imaging should be used to establish or exclude a particular diagnosis, with emphasis on the care of the patient.

B.R. HERTS and D.M. EINSTEIN

IMAGING IN PRACTICE

Imaging in acute brain infarction

A 77-year-old woman is brought by ambulance to the emergency department with suspected acute stroke. Which imaging test is recommended, and why?

B. BORG, B.R. HERTS, and T.J. MASARYK

REVIEW

Gait disorders: Search for multiple causes

Gait disorders in elderly patients often lead to falls, disability, and functional decline. More often than not, they represent more than one coexisting condition.

REVIEW

Recognizing and managing 620
acute diverticulitis for the internist
Acute diverticulitis can present in a number of ways and is often confused with colonic spasm or irritable bowel syndrome. Missing the diagnosis can have serious consequences.
