

David Rolston, MD, joins the Journal staff

Meticulous readers of the small print may have noticed a new name on our masthead in the July 2005 issue. David Rolston, MD, has joined the Journal staff as deputy editor. David has been on The Cleveland Clinic staff in the Department of General Internal Medicine since 2001. He trained at the Christian Medical College in Vellore, India. Awarded a Wellcome Trust Fellowship, he spent 3 years at St. Bartholomew's Hospital in London. He came to the States and completed a residency in internal medicine at Hahnemann in Philadelphia.

He has been involved in several aspects of postgraduate medical education, including membership on the editorial board of the Indian Journal of Gastroenterology and section editor of The National Medical Journal of India. At the Clinic, in addition to his internal medicine practice, he teaches internal medicine residents and medical students, and is involved in clinical research.

We welcome him to the Journal staff. I am sure you will see and appreciate his touch in article procurement and editing.

We view the Journal as an educational vehicle. David, the editorial staff, and I look forward to receiving your insights on article content and breadth, and I hope that you continue to enjoy the ride. As always, we invite your feedback and suggestions.
