Abdominal aortic aneurysms:
What we don't seek, we won't find 8

We don't find abdominal aortic aneurysms as often as we should. In some patients we should consider ultrasonographic screening.

B. F. MANDELL

REVIEW.....

Should we screen
for abdominal aortic aneurysms? 9

The short answer is yes, but only in the right patients.

A. A. LATIF, A. ALMAHAMEED, AND M. S. LAUER

1-MINUTE CONSULT.....

What is osteopenia,
and what should be done about it? 29

Because the term "osteopenia" is not useful as a diagnosis and can actually be harmful, I am on a personal crusade to eliminate it from the bone density lexicon.

N. B. WATTS

EDITORIAL.....

In rebuttal: Osteopenia is a useful diagnosis 34

Eliminating the term "osteopenia" would foster complacency and a do-nothing attitude toward a serious and common disease.

H. L. THACKER AND B. RICHMOND

1-MINUTE CONSULT.....

How should we advise patients
about the contraceptive patch,
given the FDA warning? 45

In theory, patients could face a higher risk of thromboembolism than with oral contraceptives. But most of all we want to urge them not to simply stop using contraception.

H. L. THACKER, T. FALCONE, A. ATREJA, A. JAIN, AND C. M. HARRIS

THE CLINICAL PICTURE.....

Severe chest pain in a 32-year-old man 49

His electrocardiogram shows ST-segment elevation in leads I, II, aVF, and V₅ and V₆, but no reciprocal changes. What is the diagnosis?

A. G. CARVALHO
