Oil it where it squeaks: 880
Evidence, experience, and osteoarthritis therapy
Since many patients with osteoarthritis do experience relief with intra-articular therapy, it may indeed pay to “oil it where it squeaks.” I just wonder how much it matters what oil we use.
B.F. MANDELL

1-MINUTE CONSULT

When can patients with acute deep vein thrombosis be allowed to get up and walk?
They should ambulate as tolerated. Bed rest is not evidence-based and may be harmful.

REVIEW

Intra-articular injections for osteoarthritis of the knee
If usual medical measures fail to control the pain of osteoarthritis of the knee, intra-articular injections of a corticosteroid, a hyaluronan, or both may help.

REVIEW

Recurrent pregnancy loss: 913
Evaluation and discussion of the causes and their management
Women who miscarry two or more consecutive pregnancies deserve an evaluation to look for the cause, which sometimes can be treated.

Headaches in older patients: 922
Special problems and concerns
Any patient older than 50 years who develops headaches for the first time or who has a change in a chronic headache pattern should be investigated for an underlying cause or exacerbating condition.

Using the new HPV vaccines in clinical practice

The new vaccines against human papillomavirus (HPV) could prevent up to 70% of cases of cervical cancer. But Pap testing will still be necessary.

INTERPRETING KEY TRIALS

Interpreting the ASTEROID trial. Coronary atherosclerosis can regress with very intensive statin therapy

The optimal strategy for lipid-lowering in patients with coronary artery disease may be to aim for the lowest low-density lipoprotein cholesterol level that can be attained without adverse effects.
