FROM THE EDITOR ............................................................................
Lung cancer screening: One step forward 306
I never expected, perhaps naively, that cancer screening would be so challenging and contentious.
B.F. MANDELL

THE CLINICAL PICTURE ......................................................................
Hyperpigmentation and hypotension 308
A 65-year-old man presents after 2 months of weakness, dizziness, and blurred vision. What test should be ordered?
K. SHAHEEN, A.H. ALRAIYES, M. BAIBARS, AND M.C. ALRAIES

ADDRESSING DISPARITIES IN HEALTH CARE ........................................
Disparities in prostate cancer 313
in African American men: What primary care physicians can do Both biologic and socioeconomic factors may be to blame. Better screening may help to close the gap.
I. WU AND C.S. MODLIN

NEW SERIES ....................................................................................
Personalizing patient care 329
Personalized health care has been anticipated for decades. Yet in its breadth and in the way we would like it to be practiced, it is still in its infancy.
K.A. TENG AND C. ENG

PERSONALIZING PATIENT CARE ..........................................................
Family history: 331
Still relevant in the genomics era
Family history is still relevant, being a proxy for genetic, environmental, and behavioral risks to health.
M. DOERR AND K. TENG

CANCER DIAGNOSIS AND MANAGEMENT ............................................
The rationale for, and design of, 337
a lung cancer screening program
We are entering a new era in which lung cancer screening may be considered the standard of care.
P. MAZZONE, FOR THE CHEST CANCER CENTER AT CLEVELAND CLINIC
