FROM THE EDITOR

The electronic health record: Getting more bang for the click 397

Bemoaning the technology is not the answer—we need to refine the EHR, but we also need to do better documentation.

B.F. MANDELL

COMMENTARY

Electronic siloing: An unintended consequence of the electronic health record 406

For all their purported benefits, electronic systems drive caregivers to work alone, thereby discouraging spontaneous interaction.

J.K. STOLLER

EDITORIAL

Electronic health records: We need to find needles, not stack more hay 410

We need a system that extends our abilities and improves the care we give—and we don't have it yet.

W.H. MORRIS
