FROM THE EDITOR
The electronic health record: Getting more bang for the click
Bemoaning the technology is not the answer—we need to refine the EHR, but we also need to do better documentation.
B.F. MANDELL

COMMENTARY
Electronic siloing: An unintended consequence of the electronic health record
For all their purported benefits, electronic systems drive caregivers to work alone, thereby discouraging spontaneous interaction.
J.K. STOLLER

EDITORIAL
Electronic health records: We need to find needles, not stack more hay
We need a system that extends our abilities and improves the care we give—and we don’t have it yet.
W.H. MORRIS

Multiple intracardiac thrombi
A 60-year-old woman presents with massive venous thrombosis. What is the cause?
J.G. HASHASH, N.S. ZEINEH, AND F.W. CROCK

REVIEW
How to interpret surveys in medical research: A practical approach
Was the survey well designed? Was the sample appropriate and the response rate adequate? And do the data support the conclusions?
C.Y. COLBERT, E. DIAZ-GUZMAN, J.D. MYERS, AND A.C. ARROLIGA
