Table of Contents

From the Editor ................................................................................................................ 517
Trying to get ahead of Alzheimer disease  Sorting out patients destined to have Alzheimer disease remains a challenge.
Brian F. Mandell, MD, PhD

COVID-19 Curbside Consults ............................................................................................ 521
SARS-CoV-2 and myocardial injury: Few answers, many questions  What is the mechanism? Is this a distinct population? What are the treatment options?
Paul C. Cremer, MD

COVID-19 Curbside Consults ............................................................................................ 526
Management of patients with COVID-19 in the MICU  The main goals are to ensure caregiver safety and provide the highest quality care.
Chao Ping Wu, MD; Mani Latifi, MD; Eduardo Mireles-Cabodevila, MD

The Clinical Picture ........................................................................................................ 532
5-Fluorouracil–induced encephalopathy  A woman on chemotherapy for rectal cancer presents with mental status changes.
Yudai Yano, MD; Akira Kuriyama, MD, MPH

The Clinical Picture ........................................................................................................ 534
Polypoid melanoma mistaken for verruca vulgaris  Polypoid melanoma is highly aggressive and often misdiagnosed.
Andrea Tan, MD; Daniel Gutierrez, MD; Nooshin K. Brinster, MD; Jennifer A. Stein, MD, PhD

Commentary ...................................................................................................................... 537
Emerging blood-based biomarkers for Alzheimer disease  A blood test for Alzheimer disease could help in drug development and patient care.
Lynn M. Bekris, PhD; James B. Leverenz, MD

1-Minute Consult .............................................................................................................. 541
Should women with HPV-related noncervical cancers be considered at high risk for cervical cancer?  Yes. Lacking guidelines, close surveillance is prudent.
Suneela Vegunta, MD; Margaret E. Long, MD

Editorial ........................................................................................................................... 545
The HPV vaccine: Understanding and addressing barriers to vaccination  Key steps include optimizing clinician-patient communication.
Pelin Batur, MD

Continued on page 516
CONTINUED FROM PAGE 514

REVIEW .............................................................................................................................. .

Polymyalgia rheumatica: An updated review 549
Suspect it in older patients with bilateral shoulder and hip stiffness in the morning.
Salman Bin Mahmood, MBBS; Elizabeth Nelson, MD; Jessica Padniewski, DO; Rawad Nasr, MD

REVIEW .............................................................................................................................. .

Thoracic aortic aneurysm: Optimal surveillance and treatment 557
Early detection, surveillance, and treatment are critical.
Tom Kai Ming Wang, MBCHB, MD(res), FRACP; Milind Y. Desai, MD

REVIEW .............................................................................................................................. .

Managing adult asthma: The 2019 GINA guidelines 569
All patients should take inhaled corticosteroids daily or as needed.
Yael Mauer, MD, MPH; Rachel Metzger Taliercio, DO

DEPARTMENTS ....................................................................................................................

CME Calendar 519
CME/MOC Instructions 576

Upcoming Features

■ COVID-19 and secondary pneumonia
■ COVID-19 and the kidney
■ Perioperative care of the pregnant patient
■ Electrodiagnostic studies: How to use and interpret
■ When premature babies grow up